Due to the resignation of the French cabinet yesterday, France finds herself in the embarrassing position of being without official representation at the London naval parley. It seems that government officials in France always carry chips on their shoulders and resign at the hint of frustration of any of their plans. It brings to mind a group of children—"If you won't play my way I'll take my little tin kitchen and go home. And that ain't all—you can't ever slide down our cellar door no more, so there!"

Orchardists and merchants are singing the blues over the lack of rain. It does seem that our regular quota of precipitation has been a trifle delayed, but it will probably arrive shortly. We are optimistic in this regard because it is rumored that the learned weather man of Santa Clara is planning to announce a dry March. If he does, valley ranchers will be assured of a deluge during that month. Our prediction, of course, is based on past prophesies of the aforementioned weather man.

A man and a woman who recently occupied considerable space in the newspapers were the man and wife who operated a "bandit-proof service station on the Oakland highway. Their last escape from holdups occurred when they shot up two men who sought to rob them, all four participants in the gun-fight receiving wounds. It is reported that since then the battle-scarred couple have sold their place of business and seek more peaceful surroundings. That was a smart thing to do, because sooner or later they would run afoul of a brace of real gunmen with possibly disastrous results to themselves. If no big time bandit believed the returns worthy of the risk there was the ever present possibility of a sojourning Chicago machine gunner cleaning them out just for the fun of seeing them bite the dust.

Llewellyn B. Peck, erstwhile publisher of the illustrious Los Gatos Star, appeared at a recent meeting of the Campbell Chamber of Commerce with an offer to start another newspaper in the Orchard City. He received no encouragement at the meeting. Since then he has approached individual business men with his proposition, which seems to require some quarantee of patronage which takes the form of advertising contracts. Naturally, the management of the Press will fight to the last ditch any attempt on the part of Mr. Peck or anyone else to start another newspaper in Campbell. The reason is obvious to even a moron. Two papers could not possibly exist here. If Mr. Peck's Websterian intellect fails to surround that situation we will say again for his benefit that two papers could not get by in Campbell. If the Master Mind is aware of this fact what, then, is the big idea? Does he believe that a sheet published by himself would be so far superior to the Campbell Press that our patrons of the past 20 years would desert us and support his newspaper? If that is his idea, Mr. Peck is treading on thin ice. If he is so hot why did he sell the list and legality of the Los Gatos Star to his competitor in that city? Simply because it griped him to death to know that a better newspaper than his own was being printed every week in the foothill town. In other words, Mr. Peck Cannot stand competition. And that fact will strangle at birth an attempt on the part of the Great Scribe to start a paper in Campbell. Because the competition he encountered in Los Gatos will be child's play compared to what we are prepared to offer him if he tries to carry through his pipe dream of another newspaper in Campbell—Campbell, on whose journalistic escutcheon there is, so far, not a singe, solitary blot!

That's all.

Country Woman's Club Program Featured the G. Washington Period

Appropriate to the approaching birthday of George Washington and the period in our history which he represents, the subject of the meeting of the Country Woman's club yesterday was "Colonial Days and Patriots." Mrs. Louis Shelley acted as chairman and gave an interesting informal talk on the first part of the topic dealing chiefly with the home life and occupations of the earlier settlers.

She told of the preparation of corn for its various uses and the same of flax and wool. She referred to laws in the different colonies by which each family was required to train at least one spinner among its members.

Curing and smoking of meats, making patchwork quilts, soap and candles occupied the hours of the women and girls, while the men cleared and tilled land, hunted and helped with the many household duties.

Mrs. Shelley exhibited samples of weaving and one of the intricate quilt patterns, and Mrs. Mary Lanphear showed a sampler worked in 1812.

The origin of Thanksgiving was the subject Mrs. R. W. Kennedy had chosen for her paper. She traced this form of festival from ancient Bible times, through the Roman era and in English history as the "harvest home," so that Governor Bradford was not instituting a new idea when he called the first thanksgiving. She also read Washington's first Thanksgiving proclamation.

A brief mention of several of the many early patriots was all that time permitted, but such outstanding figures as Roger Williams, William Penn, Israel Putnam, Paul Revere, John Hancock, George Washington and others were brought to mention.

Announcement was made of the monthly meeting of the County Federation to be held at Cupertino next week and one name was voted upon for membership.

The Miller boys returned to their homes Sunday noon.

CAMPBELL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE CALLS FOR MASS MEETING ON NEW SCHOOL

A mass meeting for the Campbell Union High School district has been called by the Chamber of Commerce for Tuesday, March 4.

Nearly everyone is agreed to the vital need of a new high school in Campbell. The only hitch seems to be the matter of a site for the school ,and with the school board divided on the proper location the project is being delayed to a great extent. The Chamber of Commerce is attempting to aid in the solution of the present problem.

The Chamber of Commerce at its regular meeting last Monday night determined to call a mass meeting for the purpose of setting forth the facts and the opinions of the voters of the seven districts, so far as they can be obtained, relative to both the Kennedy and the Hagelin tracts as desirable sites for the new high school.

The districts composing the union high school district are Campbell, Cambrian, Hamilton, Meridian, Moreland, San Tomas and Union. oVters in these distsricts are urgently requested to send in any opinions they may have regarding either site—for or against.

It is not necessary to sign the statements. You may do so if you wish, but your name will not appear in any case. These communications should be addressed to Mrs. Lydia Whitman, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Campbell. As these letters are received they will be grouped as follows: Reasons for the selection of the Kennedy site. Reasons for the selection of the Hagelin site. Reasons why the Kenedy site should not be chosen. Reasons why the Hagelin site should not be chosen. These will be compiled and read by four persons, one reading each tabulated list.

The Chamber of Commerce believes that the new high school is of vastly more importance than the choice of site and have undertaken this method to inform the voters as to the advantages and disadvantages of each site for high school purposes. The opinions advanced will later be published in the newspaper. The high school board expects to give the voters an opportunity to vote upon both sites at the coming election of trustees.

The mass meeting will be held in the grammar school auditorium Tuesday evening, March 4. Everyone is asked to try to attend this meeting and anyone is welcome.

HON. HARRY L. TODD OF SAN FRANCISCO WILL SPEAK ON "GEORGE WASHINGTON" AT MORNING PROGRAM FEBRUARY 22

Evening Show By Campbell Kiwanians Will Be Well Worth Seeing, Says Hal Morton. Harry White To Serve Noon Lunch In Cafeteria

Thirty-seven years ago on July 4 the town of Campbell held its first Old Settlers' day. Senator E. B. Conklin was chairman of the program committee and the speaker of the day was Judge M. H. Myrick. The celebration was such a marked success that another one was held the following year on Washington's birthday and at that time the basket lunch idea was inaugurated. The observance of this day with speaking, singing, ball games and a show at night have been very faithfully carried out through succeeding years and today people come from all over the country to be present at the annual celebration Feb. 22.

At the third meeting, in 1895, E. E. White was the organizer of the celebration, and among those who participated in the meeting were Benjamin Campbell, after whom the town was named; E. B. Conklin, Judge M. H. Myrick, Captain Hamilton, P. G. Keith and many others.

Among the speakers of the day at these annual gatherings have been such outstanding figures as Judge Thomas Lennon, Dr. Dillon Bronson, Dr. E. L. Parsons, the late Francis M. Righter, Prof. E. A. Cottrell, the Rev. Frank Linder, J. U. Simmons, the Rev. J. A. Stevenson, Dr. Paul Cadman, Governor C. C. Young, the Rev. G. D. Phillips, David Starr Jordon and many others. The programs have varied very little; this is particularly true of the morning program, while the afternoon program has met with slight changes from year to year.

Saturday, Feb. 22, marks the thirty-sixth annual Old Settlers' day celebration. Starting with a program in the grammar school auditorium at 10 o'clock in the morning there will be a full day for the old timers and their friends. Mrs. Ralph H. Hyde, assisted by Mrs. D. H. Cramer, Dr. F. R. Anderson, Mrs. H. M. Shadle, W. C. Bohnett and R. E. Noddin, has completed plans for the day.

A part of the morning's program will be a number of songs by the assemblage. Dr. W. I. Merrill, chairman of the day, will deliver the address of welcome. The high school orchestra, under the direction of A. A. Thielke, will contribute several selections to the entertainment and Homer De Witt Pugh will render a vocal solo. The speaker of the day will be the Hon. Harry L. Todd, postmaster of San Francisco. His subject will be, most fittingly, "George Washington."

Luncheon will be served in the grammar school cafeteria, with Harry White in charge.. The program will be resumed in the auditorium at 1:30 o'clock. The assemblage will sing the old favorites, "America the Beautiful" and "America." Stephen Merrill will favor with a vocal solo and the Rev. Roger Darling of San Jose will deliver the afternoon address.

There is to be a ball game on the local diamond and a basketball game in the gymnasium between the high school alumni team and the school unlimiteds.

The evening performance will begin at 8 o'clock in the grammar school auditorium, and will feature a minstrel show which is being prepared by Hal Morton and "Bunny" Wood. The cast of the show is composed of members of the local Kiwanis club, who are aided by the San Jose Kiwanis club quartet. Lida Gregory Jackson Studios will present "Bluff" and it is reported that a trained dog act will be an added attraction.

Dr. W. I. Merrill, chairman of the day, states that preparations are being made to receive a crowd of about 1,500 people. Mrs. Lena Rodeck, chairman of the reception committee advises that her group is ready to give all visitors the "glad hand" and Welcome them to Campbell. Mrs. C. A. Sutter, Mrs. Mary Lanphear, Mrs. G. C. Ainsley, Mrs. L. F. Shaw, Miss Mary Fablinger, Ira Abbott and A. Ferro are working on the decorations for the day. The Camp Fire girls have been authorized to sell candy on the grounds, the proceeds to go toward the building fund of the new Scout-Camp Fire building.

The keys to the city will be handed over to the Old Settlers and every citizen of Campbell is prepared to do everything in his power to add to the enjoyment of the day.

UNLIMITEDS SCORE OVER MT. VIEW IN 18-17 BATTLE FRI.

The Campbell unlimiteds have scored again, this time it was Mt. View aggregation that went under. The battle was staged at Mt. View last Friday evening, and was not an easy victory, as the score of 18-17 will testify. Gardner was high point man for Campbell. This game is next to the last game of the season, and the winning of it gave the local quint the lead in the valley league standing.

If Campbell is victorious in the final game they will have won the championship of the valley.

The same evening the 139's played at Mt. View. Their's was a much easier victory, the score being 17-11. It was a good game and a large number of Campbell rooters witnessed both games.

CAMPBELL NINE IS VICTORIOUS OVER SAN JOSE TEAM

The Campbell nine defeated the Garden City nine 6-4 in a most exciting game here Sunday afternoon. This is the third game of the league play that will decide the championship of the division. After the game was over it was charged by the Garden City aggregation that Campbell was not entitled to the victory because of the fact that they used a first division player in rules of the league. As this was the final deciding game the issue is a very vital one and a hearing has been arranged at which both sides of the story may be considered and a decision handed down.

Cecil Cutting spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Cutting.

WHAT WENT BEFORE

Capt. Lion Fellowes' American merchant ship is sunk by a British frigate off Portugal in the War of 1812. The crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English-speaking girl. Fellowes goes to Lisbon where he meets an acquaintance, Captain Chater of the American ship True Bounty, who offers him a berth as a mate, but knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy, he refuses. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of True Bounty. She is bound for home and induces Fellowes to sail as mate. He is in love with Cara. The vessel is stopped by the British frigate, Badger, Captain Collishawe. Despite his claims to American citizenship, Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger a "pressed" man. He scents treachery and his hatred of Collishawe, Cara and Chater becomes an obsession. While off New York Fellowes escapes. He suspects a plot in a meeting to be held at Chater's home and gathers a company of militia. They beat British sailors in a fight and Collishawe escapes. At Chater's home Fellowes finds Cara, her father, and Chater. They tell him Collishawe came ashore to visit Cara. Fellowes scoffs at the girl's vehement denial of conniving at his kidnaping. Search reveals no incriminating papers. Fellowes follows the Inglepin party to New York.

Joshua swung around with amazing quickness in a man of his size. There was a look almost of sly consideration in the china-blue eyes that stabbed questioningly into Fellowes'.

"Ah, yes," he answered. "Heard of you, Captain Fellowes. Heard of the incident you mention, of course. That d—d cur, Chater—ah, ahem, humph! But why d' you come to me? You must know my brother and I—"

"I have information in that connection which I think will interest you," Fellowes interrupted quietly.

Inglepin drew a step nearer. There was no suggestion of slyness in his face now. His expression was eager, curiously avaricious. His blue eyes were cold as Fellowes' own.

"This d—d license business, eh?"

"That—and more."

Inglepin hesitated, then asked abruptly:

"Treason, eh?"

"I believe so, sir."

"Knew it, by G—d!" Joshua slapped his hip delightedly. "Knew the d—d fool couldn't play with fire, and not burn his fingers. Knew it soon as I heard he was keepin' on the True Bounty's crew. But you, sir, how'd you—"

"I can't tell you here, Mr. Inglepin. Will it suffice if I say I escaped several days ago from the Badger sloop-of-war? And have just surprised your brother and his daughter, with Chater, entertaining Captain Collishawe at Chater's farm on Long Island?"

Joshua Inglepin slipped his arm through Fellowes', and the light in his eyes danced and flickered, as if a wind was blowing it.

"Come with me," he said. "My office will do. Glad you dropped in, Captain Fellowes. Believe you and I can do some business. Eh? Treason! But I expected it, I expected it. Ben always would overreach himself. Ha, ha! The d—n fool!"

* * * * * * * *

". . . a petition Lord Wellington said, the ministers were cordial, but they'd require a definite petition. I'm persuaded 'tis that document your brother has been concocting these past months."

"He's been hand-in-glove with every runagate Federalist in the North," admitted Joshua.

"Exactly, sir. And my guess is that before going further with it they awaited some answer from the Canadian authorities. If I'm right 'twas that answer Collishawe delivered at Babylon."

"And why wouldn't they have turned over the petition, or whatever the thingummy was, to him?"

"'Tis likelier they'd choose to convey it themselves, since most delicate negotiations would flow from it. I feel this the more strongly, sir, after hearing the True Bounty is held ready for sailing."

"Sounds reasonable," growled Joshua. "So our job is to find this abominable scrawl?"

"We should have your brother's house and office searched tonight," Fellowes returned promptly.

"You'll find no papers in Ben's house or office, Captain Fellowes, you nor anyone, know the scoundrel, and knowing him, I refuse to underestimate him. Aboard ship, maybe. Yes, but not until after she's sailed."

"Wait for his sailing, then, and pursue," exclaimed Fellowes.

"Take him red-handed, eh? That would be best. You may depend upon it, he and Chater are taking extraordinary precautions in whatever they are up to. As for the girl—humph! If my eyes tell me anything, she has more sense than her father."

"She is unusually intelligent," Fellowes agreed heavily. "I'd prefer not to speak of her."

"Humph! Ha! Quite so! But if I'm to play with you, captain, I want all the cards on the table—face up."

"I have no intention that it should be otherwise, sir."

Inglepin was undeterred by the frosty note in his caller's tone.

"No necessity for pique," he asserted briskly. "I can't afford to run the risk of having good plans spoiled by a man's weakness for a woman." The china-blue eyes danced again with the flickering light that seemed at once to warm and chill them. "Seen it happen too often. Shouldn't put it past Ben to use her for that purpose."

"She can have no influence upon me, Mr. Inglepin."

"Hate her, eh? Same as her father? Same as Chater?"

"Hate her?" And suddenly a flame blazed up in Fellowes. "Yes, I hate her! I hate her for my stripes. I hate her on Collishawe's account. I hate her for the treason she practices. I—I hate her!"

Joshua Inglepin sat back with a little grunt of satisfaction.

"You'll do," he decided. "I'm not so sure 'tis—ah—what you call it, Captain Fellowes; but the sentiment will safeguard my interests."

"And what may your interests be?" Fellowes asked harshly.

"Need you ask?" countered the merchant. "I am on all fours with you in this matter, sir. I'd see Ben hung high as Hamen, and Chater beside him. The girl—Well, we needn't discuss her. 'Tis not pleasant for you, and I'd not fight a woman, might I help it."

"What of Collishawe?"

"That's your affair."

"Natheless, he must figure in any bargain we strike," said Fellowes.

"Granted," conceded Joshua, "within limitations."

"As what?"

"To begin with, we must inform the proper authorities of your discoveries. I'm as skeptical as yourself of the efficacy of this step, but 'twould be inadvisable to ignore it. I am, I may say—" the mellow voice became a shade pompous—"on terms of intimacy with Governor Tompkins, who is also in command of the military district for the administration. Whatever he can do to aid us, we may rely upon. I'll see him, myself. So shall you. And we'll present the matter to him without reservation, eh?"

"I am willing," Fellowes agreed. "And then, sir?"

"Come with me, if you please."

Joshua took his hat, and motioned toward the door.

"Don't wait for me, Howell," he called to the gray clerk as they passed to the street.

Fellowes was silent until they had crossed the road.

"What other limitations to our bargain had you in mind, sir?" he asked.

"Only such as motives of patriotism should place upon the satisfaction of private enmity. Your pursuit of Captain Collishawe must await the destruction of my brother's conspiracy."

"To pursue them back we'll require a ship."

"Exactly my thought, captain! 'Tis a ship we are after this moment."

They entered South street, and turned toward Gouverneur. Ahead of them was Christian Bergh's shipyard, and Fellowes' face lighted at sight of the graceful fabric that loomed above the scaffolding of the ways.

"Ah, the beauty! The sweetest brig I ever saw!"

"No shipwright like old Christian," Inglepin responded.

"Is she yours?"

"Not yet. Christian built her for speculation. Out of blind pride and confidence in his own skill."

"She's heavier built than the regular clippers," commented Fellowes. "What's her tonnage?"

"Close to four hundred, I think. Christian built her for strength, no less than speed. And she's well sparred, you see. You could drive her in a gale under tops'ls."

"But she's long for her beam."

"Yes, that's to give her clearance. She's 115 feet over all and 28 feet beam."

Rounding the bow, Fellowes saw the name Centurion carved in square, block letters just aft of the hawser pipes. He stood so long on his vantage point, feasting his eyes on the swelling lines of the hull, estimating the sail spread of the lofty masts, fancying how she could be pushed in ordinary winds, and driven in dirty weather, that he did not hear Joshua's summons until it had been repeated.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," he exclaimed, and scrambled down to shake hands with leathery, squinty-eyed Christian Bergh.

"You like her, ja?" the old shipwright asked proudly.

"She's the handsomest thing I ever saw, Mr. Bergh. I only wish I could buy her."

"Fifteen t'ousan' tollars I ask for her, mit sails, battery, eferyt'ing."

"I haven't fifteen thousand dollars, but if I had—"

"You don't need it," Joshua interrupted abruptly. "She's sold." He turned to Bergh. "I'll pay the money into Barkers for you, eh, Christian?"

"Dot suits me, Mr. Inglepin. Undt anyt'ing you vant I put in her."

Inglepin took Fellowes by the arm, and walked a few feet aside.

"I'll wager you can run down the True Bounty with that, Captain," exulted the merchant.

"I can run down the True Bounty," assented Fellowes, "but she's no use to me unless she can fight the Badger."

"That's your bargain. Fight a King's sloop-of-war with a privateer?"

"Yes. Fight her and take her."

"A dangerous business! If 'twas a Frenchman, now, or a bloody Dago. But a Britisher!"

"Aye, the best ship of her size in the King's fleet," Fellowes rejoined, uncompromisingly.

There was comprehension, yes, and respect, in the look Joshua gave the Long Islander.

"Hate him that much, eh? But there'd be no sense in sinking yourself doing it."

"None," Fellowes admitted. "But with the right battery—"

He broke off, and hailed the shipwright, who was loitering near, gazing lovingly on the thing he had created.

"Mr. Bergh. What guns were you figuring for her?"

"Vell, I leafe dot for you undt Mr. Inglepin. But if you put in carronades, berups we say eighteen-pounders, den you better not bafe more dan sixteen—undt a couple of long twelves for chasers."

Fellowes shook his head.

"A privateer has no proper use for carronades," he said. "She should never fight at close range. Give us long twelves in the broadside batteries, and we'll mount a twenty-four-pounder Long Tom for'ard on a pivot."

"A twenty-four pounder!" Mr. Inglepin cried protestingly. "You'd rack her to pieces."

But Christian Bergh dissented vociferously.

"Not dot Centurion! I buildt her for rough vork. Ja! We put in some more heafy beams in der fo'c's'le, undt brace der deck."

"Yes, you'd better reinforce those bulwarks, Mr. Bergh. I'd like her

"My Bargain Is of the Simplest, Sir," He Answered Coolly.

to be as strong as a navy vessel of her class."

"She will be," promised the shipwright. "Mit dot brig you can fight a King's ship, if she chase you. Ja!"

They talked then of storage room, and spare sails and cables, and arrangements in the galley for a numerous crew—"you'd best reckon on a hundred and fifty men, captain," advised Inglepin. "Aside from our private ventures, I hope you'll have the luck to pick up prizes. And prizes take hands to bring them in." And afterward, in the glow of late afternoon, they said good-by to Bergh, and retraced their steps to the warehouse in Front street. Joshua led the way to the table beside which they had held their earlier conversation.

"I am a business man, sir," he said, pointing to a chair. "And I find it more satisfactory to have definite agreements, of a contractural nature, with persons I deal with. So, if you have no objections, we will reduce our relations to writing. Perhaps you will be so kind as to express your side of the bargain?"

Fellowes peered out the small-paned window next him at the tree-bordered street, dusty and peaceful and very quiet since the workers had gone home. It was difficult to associate this soberly charming scene with all the wild and turgid events that had preceded it, difficult to imagine that only a few miles distant, off Sandy Hook, the Badger plied her errands on the blockade, that perhaps Collishawe had pressed three more men to take the place of Tom, Cuffee and himself.

He was conscious of Joshua Inglepin's china-blue eyes studying his expression with avid interest.

"My bargain is of the simplest, sir," he answered coolly. "You will purchase the brig Centurion for operating as a privateer. I am to be master of the brig, and I will sail as soon as may be, whenever the True Bounty puts to sea. My major object will be to overtake the True Bounty, search her for papers or documents of treasonable purport, and if any such are found, seize all persons aboard her. Having done so much, I shall be at liberty to make every attempt to bring the sloop-of-war Badger to action, after which I will return to this port and render account to you of my operations."

"Clearly phrased," applauded Joshua, grasping a quill pen in his chubby hand. "I will write it, by your leave, sir. A mere matter of form, captain, but advisable, always advisable." He scribbled rapidly on a sheet of foolscap. "Here, sign if you please."

Fellowes wrote his name, with a perverse sense of futility in the gesture.

CHAPTER IX

The Chase Begins.

TO THE considerable amusement of Joshua Inglepin, Fellowes was obliged to rescue Tom and Cuffee from a ring of admiring idlers who crowded the taproom of the Washington hotel to watch the negro twisting horseshoes and breaking bricks in his great hands, and listening to Tom's hair-raising yarns. Cuffee had been so delighted with the admiration he aroused that he forgot his charge to restrict Tom's drinking, with the result that Mr. Grogan was a good bit more than three sheets in the wind.

"D'you want to go with me as bosun in the Centurion privateer?" demanded Fellowes.

"Boshun?"

"That's what I said. But I won't have a drunkard piping my fo'c's'le."

Cuffee, who had been humbly apologetic over his dereliction from duty, was unable to confine his enthusiasm at this news.

"Yo' ketch him ship wid Long Tom, Mars'r Fellowe'?" he cried, eyes shining.

"Yes, but her gunner is going to be a man I can depend on. Frankly, I'm at a loss what to do with you two."

"Tush," said the merchant, "we'll send 'em to Christian Bergh. He can rig hammocks for them aboard the brig. Here, Tom, give this line to Mr. Bergh. He'll take care of you. And now, by your leave, Captain, we'll have a bite of dinner, and after wait upon his excellency."

Fellowes' head was jammed with an incoherent stream of thoughts as he walked beside the merchant under the weighted, green boughs of the tulip trees. His mind was concentrated upon the future. He was planning the berthing of one hundred and fifty men, estimating the quantities of powder and shot for great guns and small, the proportion of boarding-pikes to cutlasses, of pistols to muskets, designing special broadside ports for the Long Tom in either bulwark, so that by yawing in flight, the Centurion might sting a pursuer to the utmost.

He scarcely heard Joshua Inglepin's conversation; his responses were mechanical. Eating his food, drinking the choice Madeira, it was always the same; Joshua's voice, declaiming positively, his own measured responses, the turgid stream of his thoughts.

They left the house and walked down Broadway. In Bowling Green they were challenged by a picket, but Joshua's name passed them inside the grounds of Government house, and they ascended the wide stairs of the portico among a procession of aides-de-camp and politicians. A short wait, then, and they were ushered into the presence of Governor Tompkins.

The governor was both courteous and interested.

"Captain Fellowes? Ah, yes, to be sure. Knew your father well, sir. A shame he left the legislature, but he was determined for diplomacy. Well, well! And you have been in the enemy's hands? Flogged, b'gad! And there are Federalists who would assure the country that no honest Americans have been pressed and there's not such a tool as the cat in the British fleet! But tell your story, sir."

He listened keenly, with an occasional interjection, drawing out Joshua's theories, and after his callers had concluded delivered instant judgment.

"Your lawyer friend was in the right, Captain Fellowes. We could never maintain your evidence in judicial proceedings, civil or military. Moreover, 'twould be bad politics to attempt it, for the Federalists would make capital out of our efforts. A prosecution, you see? A partisan attack upon a leader of their faction. No, no, 'twouldn't do. 'Twouldn't do at all, sir. But don't think I'm belittling the value of your information. Circumstantially, it bears out evidence we have been accumulating this past twelvemonth. The fact is, gentlemen, New England is rotten with intrigue against the national government. There's a move afoot now to summon a convention of delegates of the dissatisfied states to take action to secure a peace. There's open talk of secession."

He was silent for some minutes.

"Joshua, you have the right idea," he decided at last. "This is a matter for private enterprise. But—are you certain you wish to bring your brother to justice? Should the evidence Fellowes seeks come to light, 'twould be a hanging job, my friend."

Joshua Inglepin's features contorted spasmodically, with such a congestion of blood that Fellowes wondered if he ought to loosen the man's stock. But Joshua waved him away.

"I'm—all right." Passion throbbed in the merchant's voice. "Damme, Governor, who should bring my brother to justice, if not I? Isn't he a reproach to my name?"

"Yet, after all, your brother," the governor reminded him. "And there is the young lady. I fear, gentlemen, if the affair is as black as 'tis painted—"

Joshua Inglepin fairly shouted at Fellowes:

"Well, Captain, what have we to say to that? Shall we shrink from our task because a woman is concerned with it?"

Fellowes looked from one to the other, icily aloof.

"I have settled that issue with Mr. Inglepin," he said quietly. "Miss Inglepin must take her chance. She is not—" he struggled for the right phrase, anxious neither to overblame nor excuse—"a loyal American, your excellency."

"Forgive me, captain, if I intrude upon your personal affairs," replied the governor. "But let me ask again: are you sure you will not regret your participation? Hatred is a bitter medicine."

"Not so bitter," Joshua spoke up fiercely. "A man hates for the satisfaction of it! There's zest in a right, proper hatred. Take Ben. I hate him because he's disloyal. I hate him because he's my brother. I hate him because he's a Federalist. And I might go on indefinitely at the same rate. If I can live to see Ben ruined, I'll die happy. Happy, by G—d, sir! Eh, Fellowes?"

"I have no expectation of happiness," Fellowes answered wearily. But we wander from the point of our visit. Your excellency has not said you'll help us."

A new de luxe all-steel car for the transportation and distribution of young fish has just been put in service by the bureau of fisheries at Washington. The car resembles a conventional pullman and is fitted with tanks which will contain half a million young fish, in addition to living quarters for the crew of caretakers who accompany the finny passengers. Twelve Years Mayor and Going Strong!

Hon. E. N. Kirby, for twelve years Mayor of Abilene, Texas, who has discovered secret of success.

WHEN a man who has been mayor of a big city for twelve years finds out how to live, his words are worth listening to. Ex-Mayor E. N. Kirby of Abilene, Texas, discovered the simple way to health about ten years ago (he is now 64.)

"I am now a new man, and as active as a boy," says Mr. Kirby. "I feel fine all the time and rarely have an ache or a pain, although for twenty-five years I suffered with rheumatism, and sometimes was unable to stand or walk. I would not give up my simple health discovery—no, not for five thousand dollars in gold!" That discovery was Nujol!

That's the wonderful thing about Nujol. Although it is not a medicine and contains absolutely no drugs, its harmless internal lubrication seems to make people feel better and look on the brighter side of life, whether they are old or young.

Of course you can understand why this is so: we all of us have natural poisons in our bodies that make us feel headachy, sick and low in our minds. Nujol, which is as tasteless and colorless as pure water, helps to absorb these and carry them away, easily, regularly as clock work.

Instead of drugging and irritating your body with pills, cathartics, laxatives, and other habit-forming drugs, give your body the internal lubrication which it needs, just as much as any other machine. After a few days you will be surprised at the difference in the way you feel. You can get Nujol in a sealed package in any drug store. Nujol may change your whole outlook on life. Get a bottle today and give yourself a chance to be well!

Needless Pain!

The man who wouldn't drive his motorcar half a mile when it's out of order, will often drive his brain all day with a head that's throbbing.

Such punishment isn't very good for one's nerves! It's unwise, and it's unnecessary. A tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin will relieve a headache every time. So, remember this accepted antidote for pain, and spare yourself a lot of needless suffering. Read the proven directions and you'll discover many valuable uses for these tablets. For headaches; to check colds. To ease a sore throat and reduce the infection. For relieving neuralgic, neuritic, rheumatic pain.

People used to wonder if Bayer Aspirin was harmful. The doctors answered that question years ago. It is not. Some folks still wonder if it really does relieve pain. That's settled! For millions of men and women have found it does. To cure the cause of any pain you must consult your doctor; but you may always turn to Bayer Aspirin for immediate relief.

IN TUNE WITH THE WORLD

In the materialism of present day civilization we must not forget to cultivate the aesthetic side of human life. The arts have had their part in the development of civilization, and music has probably played the greatest part of all.

Music is instinctive—it is universal. You may pierce the thickest jungle to come upon the settlement of some savage tribe, and there you will find these aborigins experiencing the joy of primitive music from the tom toms near the tribal king. In fact, their lives are practically governed by music. It is their call to battle, their radio, their telescope, their telephone, their newspaper. With it they send messages, and give outlet to all their feelings. It plays an important part in their religious rites and festivals. With music they express their thanksgiving for deliverance from danger or famine, and with music they make their lamentations for the dead.

Then you may journey to the very seats of culture and learning, and you will find the cream of civilization enjoying the music of the world's greatest composers. As humantiy has advanced, music has kept pace with it, and it is still used to express the complexities of the human soul—its aspirations, its loves, its sorrows, its bewilderment or exultation. Fortunate is he who can release his emotions through the medium of music, and fortunate is he to whom music brings solace or inspiration, or merely the glorious expression of the joy of life. Music—the universal language that needs no interpretater when soul speaks to soul.

We in Campbell should give music its rightful place in our lives. Within us all there exists a fundamental something that responds to music—a something that may be coarsened or refined according to the esthetic influences with which we surround ourselves. A musical community is a delightful place to live in, and there is no need for anyone in Campbell being without music in some form. We can all be in tune with the world.

TWO GREAT JUDGES

William Howard Taft ends a lifetime of public service in his retirement from the supreme court bench, and the name of Charles Evans Hughes is added to the roster of great Americans who have filled the post which many regard as greater than even that of president, chief justice of the supreme court of the United States.

Thirty different men have been presidents. Only 11 have been chief justice, including Mr. Hughes. Mr. Taft is the only man in our history who has filled both posts. He brought to the supreme bench a record such as few men in America have made. He made a career of public service. After serving his native city as a public attorney and a judge, he became, successively, solicitor general of the United States, United States circuit judge, governor-general of the Philippines, secretary of war, provincial governor of Cuba, then president of the United States, and after eight years as a professor at Yale university, chief justice of the supreme court.

Mr. Taft was fortunate in being independent of financial considerations. Mr. Hughes, who succeeds him, has had to make his own way in the world. Mr. Taft had the happy faculty of holding himself aloof from partisan strife and even his political opponents never displayed toward him the bitterness which others in similar situations have aroused. Mr. Hughes has been more of a storm center, but none has ever challenged his devotion to his country's interests nor questioned his ability as one of the really great lawyers and jurists of America. His service as secretary of state and as a justice of the court which he now heads have been stepping stones toward his present exalted post. As the chief justice of the United States he is above and removed from party strife and there will be fe wif any, who will not concede that in naming him as the successor to Jay, Marshall, Chase, Fuller, and the other illustrious Americans who were his predecessors, President Hoover has made the best possible choice.

TRIAL BY JURY

A great deal of fuss is being stirred up in some quarters over what is represented as being an attempt to deprive American citizens of the right of trial by jury, in connection with the enforcement of the prohibition law.

The facts of the matter are that the national law enforcement commission, of which Hon George W. Wickersham, former attorney general of the United States, is chairman, in a report to President Hoover recommended that United States commissioners be empowered to act as magistrates for the trial of minor infractions of the law, to relieve the pressure upon the federal courts. "We think it is possible to provide for a hearing . . . before a magistrae, provided trial by jury . . . is preserved to the accused." is the exact language of the report. Mr. Wickersham goes on to suggest that in cases where the accused pleads guilty no trial is necessary, and the commissioner could save the court's time by reporting the fact to a qualified judge for sentence, and that where the plea is "not guilty" the commissioner could hear the evidence and report the recommendation to the court, "provided further that if conviction is recommended by the commissioner, the accused may within three days after filing of the commissioner's report . . . demand a trial by jury."

Those are the recommendations which some of those who are opposed to the enforcement of prohibition are trying to twist into an effort to do away with trial by jury.

The situation which would be created would be simply extending to the federal courts the practice which prevails in all state and local judicial systems. Comparatively few persons accused of misdemeanors under state laws ever get a jury trial. It is their right to demand it, but how often do they avail themselves of that right? Did anyone ever hear of a jury trial for a simple violation of the automobile speed laws, for example, or for fishing without a license? Yet everybody charged with any such minor offense could ask for and have a jury trial if he insisted on it.

The same folks who were hoping a couple of years ago that Lindy would make some fool break that would give them a chance to throw mud at him are the ones that are now chuckling because it looks as if Admiral Byrd would be stuck in the Antartic for another year. There is a perversity about unsuccessful people which makes them hate success and gloat over the misfortunes of those whom the rest of the world respects, and this perversity is too often reflected in the sensational newspapers.

MORTON EXPLAINS TICKET PRICES IN LETTER TO EDITOR

Dear Mr. Editor: I would greatly appreciate your publishing the following in the Press, by way of explanation to those who do not understand why the prices for the minstrel show Feb. 22 have been placed at $1, 75 cents and 50 cents.

At the start, I wish to say that the "talent," professional or otherwise, are receiving no compensation other than the satisfaction of having performed a noble service for our community and a worthy cause for their participation in this performance.

Anyone having any experience in the show business knows that the orchestration or music is 90 per cent of its value and ultimate success. Therefore I have engaged competent musicians, who understand theater music, to assure the public at least a fair amount of smoothness and animation. Therein is our only expense, other than for certain costumes and paraphenalia which cannot be dispensed with.

The expense of Old Settlers' day and the Kiwanis minstrel show, which must be defrayed from the proceeds of our ticket sales, will be in the neighborhood of $200, everything included.

The capacity of the grammar school auditorium is around 800 seats. Now at 50 cents each, provided we had a full house ,the proceeds from ticket sales would be about $350, presuming that several hundred seats in the balcony went at 25 and 35 cents, which would leave only about $150 to be divided equally between the Boy Scout building fund and the Campbell Chamber of Commerce; in other words, the tremendous effort put forth by those participating would produce just $75 for each organization.

On a graduated scale of $1, 75 and 50 cents, the proceeds from ticket sales should be about as follows

400 seats at $1.00	$400
200 seats at .75	150
200 seats at .50	100
Total	$650

which would net each organization approximately $200 to $225—something worth the effort.

Now if the good people of this community will take the attitude that they are donating 50 cents each toward the day's expenses and 50 cents to the Chamber of Commerce and Boy Scout building fund, they will readily see that they are witnessing a mighty, mighty good show gratis.

I thank you.

HAL MORTON.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT

"A friend of your wishes to see you," she said. "He says he knows you."

Luke frowned.

"A friend?" he repeated. "I'm sure he's mistaken me for somebody else."

"No, he particularly asked for you. He said the man who was stabbed; of course, I didnt tell him your name was Smith, because it isn't."

"Oh, yes it is, sister—I'm profoundly curious. let him come in."

The man who came in he had never seen before. His shabbiness was relieved by a collar of such surprising whiteness that Luke guessed it had been bought for the occasion, as also had the violent necktie. He was a man with a very small, sharp-featured; his heavily lidded eyes glanced furtively left and right before he came stealthily to the bed.

"All right, sister." His voice was high and husky (Luke remembered that Lewing's voice was that way, and wondered if this was a relative.

"Is this your friend?" asked the nurse.

The man nodded.

"That's him all right, miss."

The nurse disappeared, and the man bent over the bed. He smelt musty and unsavory, as though his clothes had been stored in a damp place.

"Joe says that as you didn't squeak he's going to make things right for you."

"Didn't what?" asked Luke.

"Squeak. Don't be funny! When you come out, see him." He slipped a dirty piece of paper under the pillow, and Luke heard a well-remembered rustle. "There's a fiver there for you. Joe says he'll look after you."

"God bless him!" said Luke soberly, "for if there ever was a man who wanted looking after, it's me!"

He left the hospital on a sunny afternoon, and could walk out without assistance, for he had carried no baggage. He was strong enough to walk, for he had taken an appreciable amount of exercise on the terrace of the hospital, but he had lost weight and his clothes hung loosely upon him. The mysterious man had told him to go to Mrs. Fraser at 339 Ginnett street.

He pushed open the door; a cracked bell clanged, and after a while there emerged through the door leading into the shop parlor a sharp-faced woman with brassy hair, who greeted him with all the superficial unfriendliness which he discovered was the normal attitude of the small tradesmen in this neighborhood.

"I am Mrs. Fraser,' she said.

"I was told to call and see you," he began, when she interrupted him quickly.

"Are you the man from the hospital—Smith?"

Luke smiled and nodded. She lifted the flap of the counter.

"Come in, will you?" Her tone was respectful, almost fawning. "I thought you wasn't coming out till tomorrow."

She led the way into a frowsy little parlor and closed the door communicating with the shop carefully.

"It's lucky I had the room done up for you today," she said. "I'm a rare one for getting things done in time. Will you come this way, Mr. What's-your-name?'

Curiosity impelled him to follow her. At the first sight of that dingy shop he had been tempted to turn back, to find a new foothold to life ,but now he went after the woman almost gaily. For that was the ineradicable weakness of Luke Maddison; a consuming curiosity as to what would happen next.

At some time or other there had been built a small annex to the house; the floors were firmer, the doors seemed heavier. She opened one of these and showed him into a room, the comfort of which was rather staggering. He expected to see something particularly uninviting, and it is possible that, had this been the case, he would have declined the lodging and gone elsewhere. But the bed was neat, the sheets spotless; the furniture, though plain, was ample, and a small fire burned in the grate. "To air the room," she explained, almost apologetically, and led him to understand that this luxury was impermanent.

Danty looked at Margaret in horrified amazement. His consternation was almost comic.

"You've given back all the money he gave you?" he stammered.

"Why shouldn't I? I have enough to live on," she said. "Mr. Stiles, as trustee of the fund, is making me a sufficient allowance."

He could only gaze at her dumbfounded. All his fine schemes had been blown away as a feather of steam is blown by a gale. She saved him the trouble of speaking and gave him time to recover himself, for she went on:

"Luke has never been in Paris since he went away—some interested person must have sent that wire. I almost feel as though I willed it to be sent, to give me an excuse for the terrible way I treated Luke.' She smiled. "I should be awfully uncomfortable if I thought my money made any difference to you in your scheme, Danton. Happily, you're a rich man."

Danty nodded slowly. He had that morning received a warning letter from his banker, for he had been spending money and losing large sums at his favorite gaming house in the faith that his financial position would soon be unassailable.

With an effort he recovered his balance and forced his voice into a tone of indifference.

"I'm not sure that you're wise. Did you consult your lawyer?"

She shook her head.

"In matters of conscience one does not consult lawyers," she said quietly.

It was difficult enough to make intelligent conversation. Her attitude was a dead wall built across his easy path, and at the moment it seemed unscalable. He had to play for time now; his native cunning told him that so long as he had her on his side there was no reason why he should lose hope. He had dreamed of hundreds of thousands; he had been certain of tens of thousands; there was still an odd thousand or two for the picking and possibly a greater haul if he played the game shrewdly.

"When do you expect to leave for Ronda?"

"In two days' time," she said quickly—so quickly that he realized she had worked it out to the hour. "As soon as I am certain that Luke is in Ronda I shall go to him."

"Exactly what will you say to him?"

He could not resist asking this question, though he realized even as he spoke the words that he was guilty of a tactical error.

He saw her stiffen; that cold look came back to the beautiful eyes.

"That is a matter entirely between Luke and me," she said. 'I have made this mess, I am afraid, and I must get out of it."

In his desperation he blundered again.

"You owe something to Rex's memory," he said. "I don't know what you're feeling about Luke, but there's a fact that can't be blinked. Luke could have saved your brother's life; instead, when he found he was ruined, he hounded him still further into the mire. His god is money—"

"Yet he gave me everything," she said quietly, "and when I refused him money, he went away without a word. Don't you realize, Danton, that had he gone to his lawyer, had he gone to the courts—had he done anything—I must have given him the money back, not because he had any legal right to it but because I would not have dared to face a public inquiry. He may have been mean, he may have been terribly cruel, but I cannot right one wrong with another. There is the consideration which made me give back the money to Mr. Stiles," she went on in a voice less tense, more agreeable, almost friendly. "We shall have to thresh out this business of Rex—it's very ugly and hurtful, and I can't think of it calmly even now. Luke may have some explanation; there may be a very excellent reason why he refused any further help to poor Rex. At any rate, it's my job to find the truth."

He was almost livid with a fury he could hardly disguise. His lips curled in a sneer.

"It seems to me that the result of your reconciliation—I suppose thats what it's coming to—will be to leave me in the lurch and put me wrong with anybody. Financially it may ruin me. Luke had a big influence in the city, and even now the mere suggestion that I was antagonistic to him is making a big difference."

To his surprise she laughed.

"Danton," she said almost gaily, "you're making me feel a pig! You don't imagine I would allow a friend of Rex's to suffer because of the help he tried to give me?"

Danton Morell was puzzled. Why was she so cheerful? And then he remembered—she would be in Ronda in a few days, would be united with her husband. The thought made him wince; he was beginning to understand how big a place this girl had made for herself in his life. He was not like Danton Morell to allow any woman a foothold in the cold thing he called a heart; but insensibly, and for some reason which he could not understand, she whom he had intended as a dupe had become a factor. It was almost unbelievable.

And with this came another realization that momentarily left him aghast. She was in love with her husband!

He had opened his lips to speak when there came a discreet knock at the door and the maid entered.

There's a gentleman wishes to see you, madam—a Mr. Haynes."

Had Margaret been looking at him she would have seen Danty's face go pale.

"He says he knows Mr. Maddison slightly," the girl went on, "and he wants particularly to see you."

Danty gaped at her.

"You didn't tell him I was here, did you?" he began, and saw the look of astonishment on Margaret's face.

"Do you know him?"

He nodded and glanced significantly at the girl.

"Just wait a moment outside, will you?" said Margaret, and, when the maid had gone and the dor was closed: "Who is he?"

"He's a man I don't wish to see, and a man I don't think you ought tosee. He's a criminal, the fellow who was arrested that night in the Carlton. If you take my advice you will send him away."

She hesitated.

"If he knows Luke—" she began

"He doesn't—that's just a trick to see you. He'll probably want money, and he's a pretty dangerous man."

"Then you'd better be here when he comes," she said, and saw by his consternation that this was not an acceptable suggestion. "I'd better see him," she said. "Will you wait in the little drawing room?"

Margaret in that mood he could not combat; he agreed sulkily to her suggestion, and was in the little drawing room when he heard the quick step of the Gunner pass the closed door.

Margaret was unprepared for the type that came into the drawing room. The tanned hawk face had a strength and a certain refinement which she had not expected.

"Are you Mrs. Maddison?" drawled the visitor, and she inclined her head slightly. "My name's Haynes—the police know me as Gunner Haynes. I'm a jewel thief among other things," he said.

His tone was as calm as though he were anouncing himself the member of an honorable guild.

"I met your husband once; he tried to do me a service—I should like to do him one, Mrs. Maddison.'

Again she nodded.

"Mr. Danto Morell is a friend of yours, isn't he?" he asked.

"Yes," she said coldly, "Why?"

She saw his lips twitch.

"I was wondering . . . Mrs. Maddison, would you think I was impertinent if I asked you why your husband left you?"

Her steady eyes met his.

"Do you think you would be?" she asked quietly, and saw that faint smile of his.

FARM POULTRY

PAYING POULTRY FLOCK IS GROWN

Spring-Hatched Pullets Carefully Developed Are Best.

Developing the spring-hatched pullets from the time the chicks leave the incubator until the pullets are placed in the laying house is the pathway to profits in the poultry industry.

"The object of this development is to have pullets of stamina, bone and vigor and fully up to the standard weight of the breed," says S. R. Dearstyne, poultryman at State college. "At first the proper mashes are needed until finally the laying mash containing 20 per cent of protein is given. The young pullets must have an abundance of succulent green feed, especially as the grass on the range gets old and tough. When placing birds in the laying house, do this about two weeks before they start laying so that they may become accustomed to their surroundings."

Nesting material should be changed often, runs cleared of litter, perch poles scraped and freed of mites, and the birds examined for internal parasites. A minimum of four feet of floor space to each bird is needed in the house, and at least two feet of perch pole for each three birds. Dampness in the house and damp litter is to be avoided if the birds are not to have roup and colds. Fresh, clear water is necessary and the mash hoppers are to be kept filled at all times. Oyster shell and grit should be kept before the birds, and grain fed twice each day with the heaviest amount at evening.

Mr. Dearstyne says that the poultryman will do well to spend about ten minutes each day in general observation of his flock. This will help him to find any lack of thriftiness or any indication of disease. Birds roughly handled, irregularly fed and watered, infested with parasites or neglected in other ways will not prove profitable.

Adequate Ventilation Essential for Poultry

Adequate ventilation is important for a profitable poultry flock. Sufficient fresh air must be admitted to replace the moisture-laden air thrown off by the birds. It must be admitted so as to avoid drafts. The open front principle is used extensively in many sections. It has been determined that the openings in the front wall should equal aproximately one-tenth of the floor area. To protect the flock during severe storms frames covered with a light weight of muslin may be used in the front openings.

Chicks Crowd

One case of large losses among chicks that are brooded artificially results from crowding. If for any reason the chicks become chilled they are apt to crowd together in order to keep warm. This piling up usually results in the death of several chicks at the bottom of the pile. Even if they do not die they will be stunted. Their digestive systems will be so upset that they will not eat as they should and growth will stop, making them practically worthless.

POULTRY NOTES

Hatch the chicks early so that the pullets are mature for winter egg production.

Don't forget the importance of fresh, juicy greens for both the baby chicks and old hens.

Giving hens 12 hours of light increases egg production at the season when the prices are high.

The first half of April is the ideal time to hatch chicks of smaller breeds such as the Leghorns.

To carry on heavy production hens must have strong bodies and a good supply of nourishing feeds.

When calcium carbonate is not available in sufficient qualities, hens lay soft-shelled eggs or no eggs at all.

Good producing hens may become thin if not fed sufficiently. Total feed consumption can be increased usually by giving a moistened mash once a day throughout the summer months.

Making it easier for the hens to consume large quantities of mash aids in the production of eggs. At least 10 linear feet of double hopper space should be provided for 100 hens.

Culling should not be considered as a substitute for correct management of a flock of hens. Even the good producers may cease laying in the summer if proper care is neglected.

Clean feed is essential in producing healthy chicks. All feed should be fed in troughs or hoppers. This practice may reduce the spread of coccidiosis, round worms, and tapeworms, as most diseases are introduced through the digestive tract.

Set 175 turkey eggs at one time if 125 young turkeys are desired. Usually a 70 per cent hatch can be expected. About 25 hens will lay the required number of eggs for such a setting in ten days, and the eggs should be set at the end of that period.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Naval Parley Gets Down to Business—Spain's Dictator Quits.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

MOVING slowly and not very surely toward their goal, the delegates to the five power naval conference in London spent another week mainly in private conversations designed to develop national programs, some radio addresses and one plenary session. The correspondents made such a fuss about being excluded that room was provided for a number of them at the session and the others "listened in" by microphone.

At the meeting on Thursday the delegates told something about the progress they had made toward an agreement on preliminaries. Prime Minister MacDonald had had talks with the French, Italian and Japanese, and Dino Grandi of Italy had been pressed to agree that Mussolini's proposal for the immediate establishment of ratios should be examined later. Explanation was given by Mr. Gibson of the Franco-American compromise between global tonnage and category theories of measurement of fleet strengths which was alluded to in these columns last week. The agreement is based on a maximum of transfer tonnage yearly from one category to another, and it was understood that a percentage of one-sixth of the total of any category might be accepted as the amount of tonnage possible to transfer. The matter was referred to a steering committee on motion of Mr. Stimson.

Mr. MacDonald opened the session by stating that its main purpose was to consider the agenda. He explained that there had been wide exchanges of opinions and declared "gratifying progress" had been made.

The questions proposed by the French were: First, the system of global tonnage and the French transactional proposal; second, what classifications are to be adopted; and, third, the transfer of tonnage and the conditions to be applied to such a transfer under the British system of limitation by categories.

It is proposed that the determination of ratios should be the first step and that the determination of levels of total tonnages of the various nations should then follow.

After adjournment Mr. MacDonald, who is chairman, told the correspondents: "I think we are now within measurable distance of solving the problem which up to now has not been solvable. Mind, I do not say that we are agreed as yet, but I think the steering committee will report agreement. The differences between us are so small that were you to put a candle to them, you could see through the wall of controversy." MacDonald emphasized, however, that Great Britain could not accept the global tonnage theory as now presented, saying: "There would be continued competition within categories."

IN A radio address to British and American hearers Mr. Stimson indicated that the American delegation had decided that the five-year extension of the present battleship building holiday would be the principal result of the conference. It seemed as if he had abandoned the program for cruiser reduction which was desired by President Hoover. The objectives of the United States, as outlined by Mr. Stimson, were summarized thus:

1. Parity between the British and American navies in "power and efficiency."

2. A reduction of the battleship building programs of all naval powers by postponing the five-year replacement of present capital ships, provided for by the Washington treaty.

3. Ending the rivalry in cruiser and destroyer building by limitation of the number and tonnage of these classes of surface craft.

4. Abolition of submarines, or, in any event, the reduction of their number, and prohibition of their ruthless use against merchant ships.

Reassuring his countrymen who might be alarmed by stories of crises and of the danger that the interests of the United States were being sacrificed, the secretary of state concluded:

"The members of the American delegation here in one capacity or another went through the great war. Most of us have had to study national defense in the course of our official duties. We are united in believing that our national defense, our national interests, and our prospects will continue; peace and prosperity can best be served by naval limitation and its consequent good will.

"In the belief that the same agreement, which holds out such prospects for us holds equal prospects for the other nations here, we go at our task with the assurance of the support of the people of these five great nations."

ONE of the interesting points brought out by conversations among the experts attached to the various delegations is that France and Italy must have warships large enough to store wine casks for the crews, and the extra displacement and greater tonnage required for this purpose is something to be considered, especially in regard to the smaller submarines and the torpedo boats.

There were many social entertainments for the delegates during the week, and these were never without their diplomatic importance. Some of the Americans spent the week-end at Warren house, Stanmore, the handsome country placed leased by Mr. Stimson. It was announced that all the delegates would meet the duke and duchess of York at a banquet and reception on February 19, to be given by the marquis and marchioness of Londonderry. Tiaras and full evening dress will be worn by the women, and court dress, which means black satin knee breeches and silk stockings, will adorn the gentlemen.

GEN. PRIMO DE RIVERA, for six years premier and dictator of Spain, resigned last week under virtual compulsion, and the country at once went into spasms that, it was thought, might ultimately result in the abolition of the monarchy. The dictator had put up to the chief officers of the army and navy the question of his resignation and their decision being against him, he stepped down. King Alfonso gave the job of premier to Gen. Damaso Berenguer, chief of his military household and inveterate enemy of de Rivera, and two days later Berenguer announced his cabinet, in which he took the portfolio of minister of war as well as premier.

Even before he had formed the new government the forces in opposition to Berenguer were gathering in Madrid. De Rivera, evidently believing a dictator might be down without being out, took the leadership of the Patriotic Union against his successor, and there were indications that the old charges against Berenguer in connection with the Moroccan disaster of eight years ago would be revived. There were riotous demonstrations by students and republicans which were suppressed by the troops. It was made plain that General Berenguer would rule with an iron hand until the government is firmly established. One of his first acts was the establishment of strict censorship. He announced that parliament by elections and the constitution of 1876 would be reestablished. Dispatches from Madrid said it was certain Berenguer had the support of King Alfonso and the conservative leaders, but that the danger of a revolution was not exaggerated. Primo de Rivera was quoted as saying Spain still needed a dictator and that he would "continue to serve the country and give my life if necessary."

CARL BEN EIELSON, arctic aviator, and Earl Borland, his mechanic, perished on the coast of Siberia about ninety miles east of North Cape. The wreckage of their plane was found by Pilots Crosson and Gillam and was easily identified. At this writing searching parties are still trying to find the bodies of the unfortunate flyers. Eielson and Borland were engaged in transporting passengers and furs from an icebound steamer. Their plane evidently crashed when traveling at high speed and the disaster was believed to be due to a faulty altimeter on which Eielson relied when a snowstorm through which he was flying wiped out his visibility.

SENATOR ROBINSON of Indiana, the only regular Republican on the senate's lobbying committee, was foiled in his attempt to show a connection between Senator King of Utah, Democrat, and the German dye trust. It was brought out before the committee that contributions to Kings' campaign fund were made by Herman A. Metz, American agent of the German monopoly, but when put on the stand Metz developed a conveniently faulty memory and said he had kept no record of those contributions. He admitted he sent a check for $1,000 to King in 1928 because he was interested in the campaign of his friend Al Smith. This check, King had asserted, was not cashed and was torn up by him. Metz is an official of the American I. G., a subsidiary of the German concern. He denounced as nonsensical the idea that the American company was organized to control the dye and chemical industry here until American competition could be smothered and the German interests come into the open. The low tariff members of the committee treated the dyestuff man with great consideration, but Chairman Caraway was so rough with A. L. Faubel, secretary of the American Tariff league, that they almost came to blows.

WET members of congress were elated by the announcement that the house judiciary committee would hold public hearings on measures to repeal the Eighteenth amendment, starting February 12. There isn't the slightest chance that any of the bills for repeal or modification will get through the house, which is overwhelmingly dry, but the opponents of prohibition in its present form will have a chance to present their arguments and facts and figures. The drys will have the same opportunity.

The wet measures before the committee include the Cochran resolution to repeal the Eighteenth amendment; the La Guardia resolution proposing an amendment to restore liquor control to the states; the Sabath, Igoe and Clancy resolutions to repeal the Volstead act; the Cochran resolution to permit 3 per cent wine and beer; and the Norton resolution calling for a national referendum on the Eighteenth amendment.

Attorney General Mitchell, in a letter to the expenditure committee of the house, gave notice that the employees of the Department of Justice must be dry by practice and profession, and that candidates for appointment must measure up to this. "I believe," he wrote, "that no man who makes a practice of drinking intoxicating liquor, or who has definite or pronounced views in opposition to prohibition, belongs in any post having directly to do with the prosecution of cases under the national prohibition act. It seems to me that such men had better seek positions in some other branch of the government or a private occupation."

CHAIRMAN LEGGE of the federal farm board and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, speaking over the radio, strongly urged farmers to hold down the production of surplus crops in order to help in the work of restoring their prosperity. Both speakers called attention to the outlook report of the Department of Agricultur , just issued, predicting little if any increase in farm commodity prices during 1930 if overproduction continues.

Messrs. Hyde and Legge then called on President Hoover and told him that Eastern life insurance companies are complicating the farm situation by curtailing purchase of farm mortgages in the Mississippi valley states. Unless this policy on the part of life insurance companies is changed, Mr. Hyde told the President, large scale foreclosures of farm land are certain to result.

NOTABLES taken by death during the week included Bishop Charles P. Anderson of Chicago, primate of the Episcopal church of America; Mme. Emmy Destinn, Hungarian grand opera prima donna; Dr. Harry B. Hutchins, president emeritus of the University of Michigan; Mrs. Rebecca L. Felton of Georgia, the only woman ever to hold a seat in the United States senate; Rear Admirals W. W. Kimball and Thomas Snowden and Gens. David S. Gordon and Harry Taylor.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

In Tune with the World

"Let me make the songs of a people, and let who will make their laws," so one wise man has expressed the importance of music.

Music is the universal language. It is understood, appreciated by, and inspires all people; leaping the barriers of difference in language, race, color and creed. Because of its universality, it is one of the great forces working toward universal peace and understanding.

Every people, every nation has its music; an understanding and appreciation of this music gives us an understanding and appreciation of its people.

Nature has endowed every individual with a love of music. It is the natural expression of our emotions. Each one of us responds to some strain, tune or melody. Because of this, music should be encouraged in our homes, in our schools, in our churches—everywhere in our community.

Music is a necessity of life in every community. An investment in music yields rich dividends in the way of delightful entertainment and the joys of living. Fortunately, good music is within the reach of everyone today.

Every home should be "in tune with the world." Every family should be afforded the opportunity of enjoying the best in music, for modern music conserves the home.

Such modern miracles—as the phonograph, the player piano and the radio—enable every member of the family circle to gain a better appreciation and understanding of music.

All children should have the opportunity to develop their musical talent, every home should possess one or more musical instruments. The talented youth should be given proper instruction by music teachers in our music schools.

It is the duty of every community to provide its citizens with a civic band, or orchestra. Every community should have a director of music in its schools, teaching appreciation and knowledge of music, furnishing voice and instrumental training.

"Music hath charms—." Let us take full advantage of these charms. Let's, as a community, be "in tune with the world."

Music keeps us in tune with each other as well as in tune with the world. Let it be foremost in

Campbell Union High School Notes

The students of Campbell high were honored at their regular monthly meeting when Dr. J. H. Shepherd spoke to them on the subject of surgery. Dr. Shepherd divided surgery into two classes, namely, the art and the science of surgery.

He made an interesting comparison of the doctors' offices before the time of Pasteur, the great scientific discoverer, with the doctors' offices of today. He urged the students to remember that it is success and not excuses that count.

A'CLIMBING TREES

I love to climb the mighty oak
To sit among the leaves.
And listen to the far-off birds
A'nesting in the eaves.

The pine tree too, is very nice,
When you're in need of rest,
The tree sways slowly back and forth,
And nature does the rest.

But best of all I like the birch,
To climb its truk so steep
And hearken to the sighing leaves
That tell me secrets, deep.

—Viola Blyther, '31.

THE POET

I think that I shall never be,
A whiz for writing poetry.

In finding words that ring and rhyme
And stand for thoughts that live for time,
I would that I might faster be,
In finding words for poetry.

My brain it seems to be so numb,
My pen is even more than dumb.

At last when I have written some
And all my thoughts go on the bum
I wonder why I'm wasting time,
A'hunting 'round for words to rhyme.

—V. L. Flindt, '31.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith and Mr. and Mrs. S. M. King were visiting relatives at Twin Lakes Sunday.

"See me about a telephone before the next rain!"

Last night Mr. Brown had to go out in the rain to telephone.

This was because the Browns have no telephone at home.

He went out to a public telephone at the drug store to send a private call. But when he got there, the first call he sent was to the Telephone Company, and he said:

"Come and talk to me about a telephone before the next rain!"
